Mere Brother Ki Dulhan (2011) - Today I share a new. read the whole story here Today, The New York Times ran an article about how married Jews are leaving their religion. Though the author believes that the number of Jews who have left the religion is just as great as the number of Muslims who have left Islam, the article does not take into account the huge Jewish concentration in the Orthodox community. It is also not clear whether the number of "deserting" Jews is only a function of the percentage of children who grow up in observant homes (which does not really reflect a decision to leave the religion) or if it is also affected by the number of "ultra-Orthodox" men, who were once proud of being Jewish, but now feel that leaving the Jewish faith is a foregone conclusion. Yet, this is not the most important thing about this study. I find it frightening that in America, a place which has never been run by anything but a religious structure, there are Jewish leaders who have the gall to suggest that the best way to fight anti-semitism is to find ways to introduce "lighter" concepts of Judaism. While I do not want to get too ahead of myself, I find it alarming that in a world where there are still people who would force women into slavery and commit genocide (both of which are common practice in Islam), the notion that what is best for Jews is that they leave religion and abandon their heritage seems to be the best, and indeed only response to "anti-semitism". For the sake of the rest of the world, let's stop this nonsense once and for all. In short, Judaism and Islam are two incompatible religions 82157476af
